

December 2012

The Local Diving Specialists

Presents

North America Dive News

Happy Holidays

From DNN

DISCOVER SAN DIEGO'S WRECK ALLEY

MAGNIFICENT MISSISSIPPI DIVING

EXPLORE THE JUG LONG ISLAND'S WRECK

FUN AND FANTASTIC POMPANO BEACH, FL

HEAVENLY & SPECTACULAR HOOD CANAL, WA

LOVE DIVING?
Philippines!

VOLUME 1 • ISSUE 12

$5.95 US/CAN

John C. Fitzpatrick: Exploring the "Jug Wreck"

Article by the Eco-Photo Explorers
Michael Salvarezza
Christopher P. Weaver

Wreck divers enjoy exploring the remains of sunken ships for a variety of reasons. Some enjoy the thrill of recovering artifacts, others marvel at the plethora of marine life that often inhabit these artificial environments, and still others crave the adrenaline rush of diving deeper and penetrating further inside the ghostly remains of a once proud vessel. But almost all wreck divers are enamored of studying the history of the particular wreck they are visiting, poring over old articles and stories trying to unlock the mysteries of the past. It is this connection with history that makes shipwreck diving such a rewarding and colorful sport.

The seafloor in the waters off New York and New Jersey is littered with the remains of hundreds, perhaps thousands, of shipwrecks. Although there are some very famous shipwrecks here, many are mundane vessels with forgotten histories. Some remain unidentified to this day.

▲ Photo Courtesy Chris Weaver & Mike Salvarezza, Eco-Photo Explorers

▲ Photo Courtesy Chris Weaver & Mike Salvarezza, Eco-Photo Explorers

▲ Photo Courtesy Chris Weaver & Mike Salvarezza, Eco-Photo Explorers

▲ Photo Courtesy Chris Weaver & Mike Salvarezza, Eco-Photo Explorers

For many years, northeast divers explored an unidentified shipwreck off the southern shores of Long Island near Shinnecock Inlet—it was commonly known as the “Jug Wreck”. A low lying pile of wreckage sitting in 130 fsw, the identification of the wreck site eluded divers until Ron Barnes, of the Aquarians Dive Club, surfaced with the ship’s bronze windlass cover during a dive in the late 1980s. Emblazoned on the artifact were the words: “John C. Fitzpatrick, American Ship Windlass Co. Providence RI, 1892. F.W. Wheeler & Co. Shipbuilder, West Bay City, Michigan.”

This artifact proved to be the key to solving the riddle of the “Jug Wreck”.

Built in 1892, the John C. Fitzpatrick was a four-masted wooden schooner measuring 242 feet in length with a 39-foot beam and a 16-foot draft. She displaced 1,277 gross tons.

Eleven years later on Friday April 3, 1903, after having been converted to a barge, the John C. Fitzpatrick was being towed by the tugboat Sweepstakes from Philadelphia to New Bedford, MA loaded with 2400 tons of bituminous coal when her boiler blew up. She sank almost immediately, taking her crew of five with her including George Davis, the barge’s Captain from Philadelphia and

Wherever you are,
Indian Valley Scuba is your local dive center!

Explore worlds
most dream about.

Visit us online: www.indianvalleyscuba.com
601 Yoder Road, Harleysville, PA 19438 | T: 215-513-8200

STINGRAY DIVERS

Scuba Lessons • Scuba Diving Gear
Snorkeling Gear • Air-Nitrox-Trimix-Argon
Service All Scuba Equipment

762 Grand Street, Brooklyn, NY 11211
718.384.1280 | Fax: 718.302.0465
www.stingraydivers.com

DIVE SITES :: US DIVE SITES :: NORTHEAST

NORTHEAST

John Nelson of New London, Connecticut.

Interestingly, the John C. Fitzpatrick was involved in another tragedy a year earlier. On March 17, 1902 while being towed by the same tugboat from Newport News, VA to Boston, MA along with the barge Wadena, the barges struck Shovelful Shoal, off the southern end of Monomoy Island, Cape Cod. Several days later, with worsening weather approaching, the few sailors remaining on the barges signaled distress to the nearby Life Saving Station on Monomoy Island. What followed was a tragic attempt at rescue that resulted in the deaths of twelve men, five crewmembers of the two barges and seven crewmembers of the Life Saving Station. This incident is often referred to as one of the worst Life Saving disasters off Cape Cod.

Today, the wreckage of the John C. Fitzpatrick lies in 130-140 FSW about 10 miles southeast of the Shinnecock Inlet. The wreck is low lying and scattered across a wide swath of ocean floor. For divers who are experienced to visit these depths, the wreck is an ideal hunting ground for large lobsters. Divers will also find Red Hake, Atlantic Cod, Flounder and Fluke along with Black Sea Bass and occasional pelagics that make

▲ Photo Courtesy Chris Weaver & Mike Salvarezza, Eco-Photo Explorers

FIND MORE ONLINE AT: www.divenewsnetwork.com

Lehigh Valley dive center

Your home for recreational and technical Dive training, equipment, rentals, and repairs!

Complete Selection of Dive and Snorkel Equipment & Accessories

All servicing performed by Certified Technicians

Equipment Rental by the day or week

(610) 746-4016
231 Nazareth Pike (Route 191 North)
Bethlehem, PA 18020

One Mile From Dutch Springs

Visit us now at www.LVDive.com

CHARTERS • TRAINING
WRECK & SHARK DIVING & MORE

OLYMPUS
DIVE CENTER

The Better Way To Dive North Carolina

NAUI WORLDWIDE
DIVE SAFETY THROUGH EDUCATION

OMS SCUBAPRO PADI

252-726-9432

713 Shepard St.,
Morehead City, North Carolina 28557
WWW.OLYMPUSDIVING.COM

FISHEYE FIX S100
For the Canon PowerShot S100

Best Point & Shoot for 2012

BACKSCATTER
Underwater Video & Photo

USA West 831.645.1082
USA East 603.432.1997

BACKSCATTER.COM

their way through these waters. Although penetration on this wreck is not possible due to the broken up nature of her wreckage, the use of wreck reels are encouraged to help with navigation on a site that can be a little confusing.

Wreck divers love to touch history. When diving on the John C. Fitzpatrick, divers are visiting the remains of a four-masted schooner that ended its life as a coal-carrying barge. She took the lives of several men with her in her watery demise. Shipwrecks with this type of tragic history are fascinating, sobering but ultimately rewarding experiences. It's what northeast wreck diving is all about. ■

Special thanks to our Sponsors

Stingray Divers

www.stingraydivers.com

Captain Mike's Diving

www.captainmikesdiving.com

King's County Diving

www.kcdivers.com

QC Scuba

www.qcscuba.com

RV Garloo

www.garlooent.com

Swim and Scuba

www.swimandscuba.com

Discover Diving

www.ddwny.com

Dive Master Services

www.scubadms.com

Jeanne II

www.jeanne-ii.com

National Aquatic Service

www.nationalaquatic.com

Oceanblue Divers

www.oceanbluedivers.com

Pan Aqua Diving

www.panaqua.com

LONG ISLAND DIVERS ASSOCIATION

LIDA is a not-for-profit regional organization dedicated to the promotion of local diving and is staffed completely by volunteers.

www.lidaonline.com

Captain Mike's Diving

City Island, NY

718-885-1588

www.captainmikesdiving.com

Kings County Divers

Brooklyn, NY

718-648-4232

www.kcdivers.com

QC Scuba

Wantagh, NY

516-826-7222

www.qcscuba.com

RV Garloo

Captree Boat Basin, Long Island

914-589-1368

www.garlooent.com

Swim and Scuba

Rockville Centre, NY

516-872-4571

www.swimandscuba.com

Serving the Long Island and Greater New York Diving Community for More Than 25 Years!